

The Centre for Eating and Dieting Disorders online learning programs provide relevant professional development suitable for Medical Practitioners, Nurses, Dietitians, Psychologists and other allied health professionals. These courses have been designed to meet the CPD requirements of the bodies governing these professional groups. Each program offers a flexible and effective way to meet your CPD requirements as you complete the relevant online assessment.

Supported By	The Essentials
	The RACGP understands that it is important to recognise education that GPs see as personally valuable to their education - GPs can self-direct activities that the QI&CPD Program have not accredited. This provides GPs with increased flexibility and choice, and acknowledges the value of a diverse range of educational activities to the GP on an individual basis. The RACGP supports all GPs in achieving their personal needs. Participation in unaccredited activities is entirely optional and, if chosen, GPs can record their attendance, via the online system. GPs can record an unlimited number of Category 2 unaccredited activities, however, QI&CPD points are capped at 20 per triennium.
